AN ARABIAN TABLE,

Friday, : : Nov. 26, 1875 PERSEVERE AND PROSPER.

To the manly will there's ever a way!" Said a simple Arab youth; 'And I am going to try, this very day, If my teacher tells the truth; He's always saying,—the good old man,— 'Now, please remember, my dear, 'Now, please remember, my dear,
You are sure to win, whatever your plan,
If you steadily persevere!'
I mean to try it—upon my life!
If I go through tire and water!
And since I wish to marry a wife,
I'll have the Calif's daughter!'
So off to the Vixter straight he goes,
Who only laughed at the lad:

So off to the Visier straight he goes,
Who only laughed at the lad;
And said to him 'Nay'—as you may su
For he thought the fellow was mad;
And still for many and many a day
He came to plead his case,
But the Vizier only answered 'Nay,'
And laughed him in the face.
At last, the Calif came across, Now by my head?' the Cailf said. Tis only the wise and great Calif's daughter may ask to wed, For rank with rank must mate:

Unless, mayhap, some lucky deed May serve for an equal claim, (For merit, I own, should have its need, And princes yield to fame.) In the Tigris once a gem was lost, Twas ages and ages since. A Ruby of wondrous size and cost; And it for the noblest prince;
That gem, my lad, must surely be
Somewhere beneath the water.
So find it bey, and bring it to me,
Then come and marry my daughter?
And so I will!" the lad replied.
And off to the river he ray:

And off to the river he ran; And he cips away at the foamy tide, As fast as ever he can; With a little cup he dips away, Now what's that fellow about? Now what's that fellow about?
He's agoing to find the gem some day,
By draining the Tigris out!
And still he dips by day and night,
"Till the fishes begin to cry,
"This fellow is such a wiliful wight,
He'll dip the river dry!"
And so they sent their monarch to say,
(A wise and reverend fish,) Why are you dipping our water away? And what do you please to wish?" I want the Ruby, sir!" he cried;

From out the foamy water; and so the lad obtained his prize And wed the Califf's daughter! L'ENVOL This pleasant story was meant to teach
